

George had learned the trade of silversmith which he practiced for some time. Among the collector's items today are spoons of coin silver made by him.

When war between the states erupted it was agreed that George being beyond the age of the first recruits would manage the farm he and Billy Yancey owned, while Capt. Billy was in service. But when there was a call for more men he enlisted in the Churchville Cavalry, later known as Co. L 14th Va. Cav. of Gen. John McCausland's Brigade.

The house in which he and Diana lived on the Stanardsville Pike near Cross Roads was high above the road. So when the tramp, tramp of approaching soldiers was heard Diana had all lamps and candles extinguished. In darkness the house was unnoticed.

When the War was over George moved his family to Harrisonburg, where he erected a building near Court Square in which he operated a mercantile and jewelry business. In an 1874 copy of The Daily News Record he advertised, "George O. Conrad Dealer in Sewing Machines and Attachments". He also served several terms as mayor. But, he was not the only civic minded member of the family.

In 1884 (105) Diana Conrad, Juliet Strayer, Sallie Kisling and others were granted permission to incorporate "The Women's Temperance Coffee and Lunch House and Reading Room of Harrisonburg". ... "to furnish comforting and wholesome food, coffee, tea, and other non-intoxicating drinks, to the residents, especially the young men and boys of Harrisonburg, and vicinity and to furnish them a comfortable and attractive place to resort, where they may engage in reading approved moral and religious literature and the current news of the day, and in playing games of skill under the restricting influence of and in the presence of, Christian women, and to use all lawful means and influence to save the young people of Harrisonburg from the temptations of the street. ... Said Association, is purely charitable."

Edward and George Newton Conrad, sons of George O. and Diana Conrad, founded the law firm of "Conrad and Conrad", which was known throughout Virginia and surrounding states. Edward had begun practice with his uncle, Charles Albert Yancey, after whose death George Newton Conrad joined him. Edward married Virginia Smith Irick, daughter of Andrew and Margret Laird Irick and granddaughter of James Laird for whom Laird's Knob is named. Their son Charles Conrad, probably the first child specialist in the Valley, served as head of The Pediatrics Department, of Rockingham Memorial Hospital. He married Annie Gilliam, daughter of James Gilliam. To preserve for her grandchildren a glimpse of the charm of Lynchburg as she knew it, she wrote, and published a delightful little book, which she titled "The Street Above The Steps". Dr. Charles Conrad's brother Laird Conrad, like his father, was a highly regarded and admired lawyer. His widow, Margaret Davis Conrad donated his extensive library to Harrisonburg's Bar Association, which established The Laird L. Conrad Memorial Library, now part of the library of Madison College. At the dedication, in the Court House, with his cousin, Judge Hamilton Haas presiding the principal speaker, Sen. George Aldhizer described Laird Conrad as "a lawyer's lawyer and a master researcher and legal thinker."

George Newton Conrad, Ed's brother and law partner served as State Senator and Commonwealth's Attorney. He was also active in civic and religious causes. His eloquence drew many to the Court Room or wherever he was to speak. Following her attendance at "Miss Baldwin's Seminary for Southern Belles" in Staunton Va. he married Miss Emily Pasco. A newspaper account of their wedding reports, "A brilliant assemblage gathered, on Wednesday evening of last week, at The Presbyterian Church in Monticello, Florida, to witness the marriage of Miss Emily Pasco, daughter of ex-Senator (U.S.) and Mrs. Samuel Pasco of Florida and George Newton Conrad of Harrisonburg. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with daisies, smilax and palms, which effectively threw into relief a prevailing color tone of pink. The bridal party entered the church shortly after nine o'clock to the inspiring strains of the march from Tannhauser and advanced in couples to the altar. The ushers Messers James D. Pasco, Will Denham, Robert Denham and Sam N. Pasco and the groomsmen, Messers Joseph T. Houck, and Dr. T. C. Firebaugh of Harrisonburg, Jack Pasco and A. N.

Turnbull were followed by the bridesmaids Misses Litchfield, Hansell, Bett and Bessie Denham. These young ladies were gowned in pink organdy, and carried pink carnations. Following them came Mr. Samuel Pasco Jr. brother of the bride and Miss Helen Denham, first bridesmaid, who was also in pink. Then came the maid of honor Miss Elizabeth Pasco, sister of the bride wearing white Paris mouseline. The bride, who approached with her father wore white satin with real lace, and pearls. She was immediately preceded by her flower girl, little Jessie Lloyd Turnbull and her page Master Will Denham. The party formed an exceedingly picturesque group about the altar, where they were met by the groom and his best man Mr. William Henry Rohr, of Virginia. The ceremony was performed by Rev. P. L. Baker, after which the party retired from the church with the triumphant strains, of Mendelsohn's Wedding march filling the air.

The marriage was followed by a delightful reception at the home of Senator Pasco where a large company of friends was handsomely entertained. On the following day K. B. Denham, an uncle of the bride, who is General Superintendent of the Plant System, tendered Mr. and Mrs. Conrad a special train, from Monticello to Savannah. On Friday afternoon in company with Mr. Conrad's Harrisonburg friends, attending the wedding, they left Savannah by the steamer "City of Savannah" for New York. After spending a day or two in that city their faces were turned homeward. ... Mr. and Mrs. Conrad are now at Natural Bridge."

"Belle Boyd is Dead"

George and Emily Conrad had six children: George and Sam like their father were lawyers. John died shortly after WWII. Jessie married Howard Gibbons, Business Manager of Madison College. Mary married James Stevenson, Professor at Clemson, and Emily lived only a year.

Thomas Miller Conrad also found his bride in Monticello, Florida. His first wife was Minnie Palmer a daughter of Dr. T. M. Palmer; his second, the widow of Charles Jeffries was the former Lucy Bernard of Jacksonville, Florida, Thomas Miller Conrad's adopted home. Their son Thomas Jr. was Cashier of The Citizens Bank of Lakeland, Florida. Their daughter Mary Virginia Conrad married Leonard Wallace Riggins of Lakeland. After Thomas Conrad Sr. died, Lucy was appointed Dietitian and Dean of Women at Sutherland. (104)

Three daughters, Molly, Fanny and Betty completed the family of George and Diana. Molly taught school for a number of years then turned to genealogy. She took an active part in organizing the local chapters of the DAR and UDC.

Fanny married Dr. T. Olin Jones whose father Rev. J. W. Jones was chaplain of The Army of Northern Virginia. Charles Mauzy, Fanny's cousin used to tell about having a cold that lingered too long. One day he was passing the office and Dr. Jones called him in. Having just returned from a medical meeting he was anxious to look at Charles' throat. Yes, there was the trouble, his tonsils. So, with Charles' consent they were snipped out and Charles continued his walk home a distance of several blocks. Later Dr. Jones had to be summoned to stop the bleeding.

Fanny and Olin Jones had two children. Their daughter Corrine married Mike (Lucius Samuel) Fletcher, of Linville Depot. He was Principal of Linville-Edom High School. Corinne died of flu, just a few months later. Their son also was quite young when he died.

No truer description of Betty Conrad, could ever be written than the one which appeared Oct. 5, 1946 in The Daily News Record. "She was keenly interested in every phase of life and her charm and radiant personality were an inspiration to all who knew her." Her first husband, John Logan was Deputy Clerk of Rockingham Co. Circuit Court. He was the son of Joseph Logan, Editor of The Register, and Adelaide Hamilton Haas Logan. (104) John and Betty had two children, Conrad and Margaret. Conrad author, lecturer, Head of the English Department of Madison College was an inspiring force in establishing a Public Library in Harrisonburg. His wife Mary Jarman Logan and he were both descendants of Capt. Layton Yancey. Margaret Logan married William Smithey who was then teaching at Madison. When he retired in Charlottesville he was Professor of Secondary Education at The University.

The children were both quite young when John Logan died. Five years later Betty married John's cousin Talfourd N. Haas, son of Maj. Charles and Isabelle Hamilton Haas. After graduation from The University of Virginia Law School Talfourd went to North Dakota and other western states before returning to Harrisburg to practice law. Serving first as Town Attorney, then as Judge of the Circuit Court, he was author of various pamphlets dealing with equitable taxation, and an early advocate of old age pensions.

He and Betty had a daughter, Elizabeth who married Albert Strayer Kemper Jr.. During his boyhood his family lived at "Madison Hall" the home of John Madison which Dr. George Whitfield Kemper Sr. had purchased in 1809. One unique feature remembered from a description of the house many years ago, was that there was a powder or wig room on either side of a fireplace in the living room.

Another story concerns Gen. Jackson who had spent the night at Dr. Kemper's (Albert's grandfather) while his troops were camping in woods across the river, a short distance away. At breakfast, someone observed that enemy soldiers guarded the bridge that Gen. Jackson had to cross. Fortunately a hard rain was falling so the guards did not detain the doctor with his hat pulled down and collar up, as he hurried over the bridge with his little black bag, to see a patient in the neighborhood, no doubt. Though the hat and raincoat and bag were Dr. Kemper's, too late they realized that the General had joined his troops.

Before "Madison Hall" burned Dr. Albert Kemper had moved his family to the new house at "Bogota". This was the same location mentioned when Washington visited Gabriel Jones, but not the same house.

Elizabeth's brother Hamilton, a lawyer, began practice with his father, who retired from the Bench. Some years later the legislature elected Hamilton Circuit Judge.

Shortly after his marriage to Ethel Shoemaker, a picture was found, of their house as originally designed for his grandparents. The vicissitudes of time had prompted alterations. However, restoration was soon in progress. Today it is an attractive Harrisburg landmark, at the corner of South Main and Grace Street.

The only mother Margaret Jane could remember was Mary Gibbons, second wife of William Burbridge Yancey, for she was not a year old when her real mother died. At twenty-one Maggie as she was called, married Joseph Nicholas Mauzy, son of Albert Gallatin Mauzy, of Montevideo, and grandson of Col. Joseph Mauzy. Temporarily, Maggie and Joseph lived at Montevideo, then moved to the home of Joseph's maternal grandfather, John Nicholas. It was on the Pineville Road just beyond the intersection with Lawyer Road.

This large brick house stands on a slight elevation, approached down a long straight lane. Not visible at this point, but nearby on Cub Run is the fine old stone house of Richard Mauzy, who edited and published The Spectator, of Staunton, Virginia.

Maggie and Joseph had eleven children; five sons William, Thomas, Hal, Layton and Charles; and six daughters, Fanny, Minnie, Virginia, Nannie, Diana and Teens. William died in his youth. Thomas married Byrd Roller and moved to Staunton. Layton, known to his friends as Doc entered the ministry and with his French ancestry in mind, changed from Mauzy to Mauzé. Eleanor Cameron Harmon, his wife, was the daughter of State Treasurer A.W. Harmon. When not in Richmond, her family's home was "The Oaks" near Lexington. There Thomas Jefferson oft visited Harmons of an earlier generation. At one time Eleanor's father owned Naturel Bridge and the land around it.

Two sons of Layton and Eleanor also chose ministerial careers. George married Elsie Brown of Charlotte, North Caroline. He was sent to The First Presbyterian Church, in San Antonio, Texas. His brother, Layton married Isabelle Dunn of Kinston, North Carolina and became minister of Central Presbyterian Church of St. Louis, Missouri. When writing of the death of Richard Anberg, publisher of the St. Louis Globe-Democrate, Holmes Alexander referred to the eulogy, by J. Layton Mauzé Jr. D.D. as "a literary masterpiece" in "its balanced phrase" and "Choice of words".

A third son Jean Mauzé, Vice President of The New York Trust Co., married Abby Rockefeller. In France they visited the village of Mauzé, east of La Rochelle. The medieval castle which belonged to the family was still standing. Even though built during the 17th century, pictures sent to relatives reveal great charm. Approximately ten families, of that name are believed to have left France after The Edict of Nantes and become naturalized English citizens. In the 1732 Register of The French Protestant Church of London is, we are told, a Joseph Mauzé. (112)

Charles Mauzé, an attorney in Lexington, North Carolina married Judy Paschall of Wilson. Eleanor, his sister, and her husband Sanford Frank Conly Jr. settled in Columbia Missouri. Another sister, Margaret married Charles Carson Jr. son of a Presbyterian minister, and like her brother George resides in San Antonio, Texas.

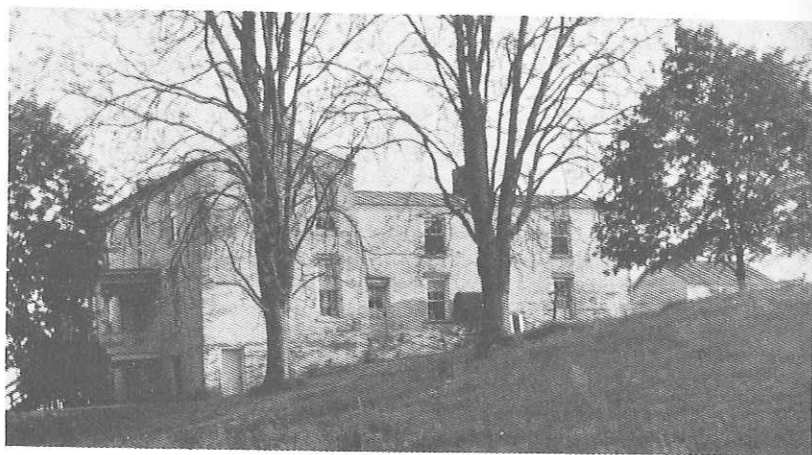

Charles Hampton Mauzy was a small boy when Maggie and Joseph moved to the Kyger farm on the Pineville Road, not far from his grandfather's. Charles became a banker. He often said jokingly that he believed it was the two o'clock closing that first appealed to him. He married Charlotte Richardson of Staunton, Virginia. Lured by her sisters letters extolling the beauties of California they went west to establish their home in San Francisco. But after surviving that city's worst earthquake, they gratefully returned to Harrisonburg, where Charles served as Cashier of The Rockingham National Bank for many years. When he retired he was Executive Vice President. He was responsible for establishing The Rotary Club Boys Camp at Island Ford, on the Shenandoah River. Dr. C. Hampton Mauzy, son of Charles and Charlotte, was Professor of surgical obstetrics and gynecology at Bowman-Gray School of Medicine of Lake Forest College. His brother Lt. Col. Royall R. Mauzy, an electrical engineer served in important staff and command positions with the Army Signal Corps communications security division. Their sister, Charlotte, married Robert Burnett and moved to Staunton, Virginia.

Harry Mauzy, remembered as "Hal", married Patty Taylor. Their early years were spent in Kentucky and in Tennessee. Then they moved to St. Louis, Missouri where he is buried. They had four children. One daughter served as a WAAC.

Minnie Mauzy, Joseph's and Maggie's oldest daughter married Edgar Brown Sellers, son of Dr. Theodore Sellers, and lived near the dam on the Shenandoah River. They had two sons Brown and Mauzy Sellers.

Fanny Mauzy married Prentiss Weaver, son of Madison Weaver who with his brother Robert came to Rockingham from Madison County. Together they purchased "Lethe" an historic estate southeast of Harrisonburg. Built by Peachy Ridgeway Gilmer whose son Thomas married Elizabeth Lewis, sister of Fanny Lewis Yancey, the house, of English brick is located some distance, from the river, surrounded by a vast green lawn. While visiting at "Lethe", George Washington carved his initials on the frame of the front door, as have later Presidents. Robert Weaver and his wife Lucy, daughter of Bernard Peyton Teel, chose this house, while Madison Weaver and his wife, Sarah Carpenter, selected a higher elevation upon which to build theirs. When completed they called theirs "Medford". It was here that Fanny and Prentiss were living, when their sons were small.

When they moved to their home at Island Ford, not far from "Locust Dale" and "River Bank" they called it "Maple Grove". It is now the home of their son Russell, prominent lawyer in Harrisonburg and former member of The Virginia General Assembly. His brother, Jim, outstanding football star of Washington and Lee, and The University of Virginia, became head of one of the largest insurance firms in the Valley, The Yancey Weaver, Grattan Insurance Agency. James and his wife Margaret Grattan Weaver bought and restored "Inglewood" the home of her grandfather, John Roller. The house had been built in 1818 by Robert Gray of "Collicello" for his son.

This "Inglewood" north of Harrisonburg and perhaps twenty miles from the River is not to be confused with the home of Columbia Yancey Harnsberger, also called "Inglewood", on the River near Elkton.

It was at "Maple Grove" that Teens Mauzy, Fanny's sister married Roy Gillum of Charlottesville. Teens was a close friend of Mamie and Nannie Yancey, thus a frequent visitor at "Willow Bank".

Another sister, Diana Mauzy, married James Ballard Dyer of Martinsville, Virginia. They moved to Winston Salem where she took an interest in civic and religious activities. Her sister Virginia Mauzy married Howard LeRoy Hopkins, and moved to Fairfax, Virginia. He was the son of Richard Elliot and Sarah Wolfe Hopkins. His father was a brother of Gerard T. Hopkins of "Cave Hill" and his mother, a daughter of Dr. Wolfe, a well known physician of the Elkton area.

William Burbridge Yancey and his second wife, Mary Gibbons Yancey lost their two oldest children. Robert died before he was a day old and his twin sister Mary at the age of three years. Two younger sons Layton and John, survived their parents.

Layton Burbridge Yancey graduated from The University of Virginia and in 1873 from Baltimore Medical College. After many years of practice in the Elkton area he had the reputation of responding to every summons, regardless of the distance or the hour. His first wife, Frances Virginia Hopkins, was a daughter of Gerard T. Hopkins and his wife Frances Virginia Kisling. One wonders whether his name originally may not have been Jarred, a descendant of perhaps, John and Alice Jarred Hopkins of Brunswick County. His name in early accounts is found as Gerad and Gerrad. "Cave Hill" has served Kislings and Hopkins.

The name is derived from a cave on the property, used by the Indians as living quarters. Smoke could escape through an opening in the ceiling.

The acreage had been granted, in 1759 to one Barnett Mann for thirty-five shillings (not a small amount in those days). Attached to the linen binder of the yellowed parchment, is the wax seal of the Crown of England, King George II.

"Cave Hill" mentioned earlier as the home of Henry Kisling, friend and neighbor of Will Yancey, was inherited by Frances Kisling Hopkins, and has been a Hopkins residence ever since. Mr. Hopkins owned Rockingham Virginia Mineral Springs, in the foothills of the Massanutten Mountains. It was there that Sidney Lanier found an ideal haven for preparing his lectures on The Science of English Verse, which he was to deliver at Johns Hopkins University. A sculptor joined him at The Springs and later presented Mr. Hopkins with two life-like statues, one of Hera, Goddess of Fruit and the other of Ceres, Goddess of Grain. These are inserted in the columns that grace the entrance, to the house at "Cave Hill". (146)

Dr. Layton Yancey and his wife "Jenny" as he called Virginia, had three daughters; Mary, Virginia and Louise, and a son Charles Layton. He married Eleanor Cameron White, a daughter of Thomas L. and Eleanor Cameron White of Lexington, Virginia. Oklahoma was a land of opportunity in those days and they went to Tulsa. Charles became a prominent civic leader and corporation lawyer. He helped to organize the First National Bank of Tulsa and The Morris Plan Bank of Oklahoma; operated a large cattle ranch; was actively interested in The Salvation Army and The Y.M.C.A.; and in building airports. (147) It was due to his encouragement that Whitfield Yancey Mauzy, son of his cousin Nettie Yancey Mauzy, chose Tulsa for his home.

Mary Yancey, after attending Mary Washington College and The University of Virginia taught school in Rockingham for a number of years. She and her husband, John Pence, lived north of Mt. Crawford, Va.. When they moved to Bridgewater Mary gave generously, both time and talents to help students at the College. Her sister, Virginia, married Welty Compton of Charlottesville, a member of one of the oldest families in Virginia. They moved to West Palm Beach, Florida. One son, Welty, lived in Panama, while the other, Burbridge remained in West Palm Beach. Virginia's first husband predeceased her but she did not return to the Valley. As her second husband she married Marion Harman, also of West Palm Beach.

Dr. Yancey's other daughter, Louise, married Frank Yancey, a son of Capt. Billy Yancey of "River Bank" Layton and Billy were step-brothers; sons of Will Yancey. However, Billy's mother was Mary K. Smith Yancey, Will's 1st wife and Layton's mother was Mary Gibbons Yancey, Will's 2nd wife.

Originally a merchant and banker, Frank later turned to the manufacture of tannic acid, in Galax. In 1928 he brought his family back to McGaheysville and pioneered in large scale poultry production. (111) Frank and Louise had three children; Louise, Frances and Layton. Frances lived only a few months. Louise married Albert Joseph, son of William and Sarah L. Arey Joseph. Their residence was in Harrisonburg but Albert's special interest was his cattle. He founded The Shenandoah Valley Livestock Sales Inc.. Louise's brother, Layton, married Mary Moore Fontaine of Wytheville, Va. a daughter of Benjamin Wade and Julia Moore Fontaine. Julia's home had been "Mooreland" south of New Market, Va.. Layton and his family live in Staunton, Va. where he is an accountant.

Two years after Virginia Hopkins Yancey died Dr. Layton Yancey married Ella Rush Hopkins, the daughter of Charles and Phoebe Rush and widow of George Whitfield Hopkins. They had one son, Everette Hopkins.

John Gibbons Yancey, the youngest son of William Burbridge and Mary Gibbons Yancey, unlike his taller and slender brothers, was short and rotund. Cofounder of the firm of Yancey and Kent, later known as Yancey, Snell and Company, then Harrisonburg Milling Company, he operated a wholesale grocery and mill. It was located at the present site of the Rocco Feed Company, on North Main Street in Harrisonburg. When telephones reached this area John Yancey was named president of The Valley Telephone Company. His wife Bennett was the daughter of Philo Bradley, who with his brother Schuyler owned and operated The Bradley Foundry, established in 1850. It made kettles, stoves, hardware plows and a variety of other items. When it closed in 1965, some claimed, that its dies traced progress, from the days of oxen to modern mechanical equipment (113).

John and Bennett Yancey had three sons; John, Brad and Ned, and a daughter Sue. She married Ernest Line-weaver, son of Abraham Newton and Harriet Liskey Lineweaver. Three brothers of that family came to America from Germany. Two of them settled near Philadelphia but the third came to the Valley. Ernest owned and operated the Lineweaver Motor Company, until he retired and assumed the management of "Dogwood Farms", recently purchased by Sue's brothers Brad, and Ned. Both though living in Canada planned to retire in a few years and return to Virginia. Bradley, Canadian manager of Dupont Explosive Division, in Montreal, married Jean McCready of Tacoma, Washington. They had three children; Richard, John and Jean. Three years after her death he married her close friend Jessie Hendry of Montreal.

His brother Ned, (Edward Burbridge) General Manager of The Explosive Department of Dupont married in Philadelphia, Jessie Willits, daughter of Rear Admiral George S. and Sylvia Gaston Willits.

Neither brother lived to retire to enjoy life on their farms. So, "Dogwood Farms" were sold to Robert and Gladys Hopkins Strickler, and Sue and Ernest Lineweaver returned to Harrisonburg and the home of her childhood, on south Main Street.

John Gibbons Yancey Jr. married Lucille Rosenberger of "Rosendale" north of Harrisonburg, near Endless Caverns. The house was built by _____ Zirkle and added to by Lucille's grandfather, George Washington Rosenberger. Many beautiful family heirlooms survive including a rosewood piano inlaid with mother-of-pearl, which was brought from Baltimore in a wagon. John Yancey joined The Dechert Insurance Agency. After Mr. Dechert's death, John's cousin James Weaver became his partner and the name of the firm was changed, to Yancey-Weaver Insurance Agency. When John and Lucille's daughter, Dorothy married John Grattan, brother-in-law of James Weaver, his name was added making the name Yancey, Weaver, Grattan Insurance Agency.
