

Layton kept in close touch with relatives and friends across the mountain. Ten years after the death of his first wife he married Kathleen Duff of Stanardsville, who won the admiration and affection of all of her new relatives and friends.

Lurenna (widow of Jacob Layton Yancey) and her second husband Peter Hinton, the son of Peter and Mary Scothern Hinton, had two children, John and Mary Jane. Their daughter married Frank Armentrout, who purchased the mill, from Mary Jane's half brother, Richard Yancey. He changed the name to "Armentrout's Mill." Years later Robert Armentrout sold the buhrstones, for use in restoring "McCormick's Mill" located near Steel's Tavern. It was in a little shop near this mill, that Cyrus McCormick and his father, developed their first reaper, in 1831. "Hinton's Mill" was built before the Revolutionary War, so if these were the original stones they probably came from France.

Mary Jane and Frank Armentrout had nine children which meant that Lurenna, who lived nearly twenty-four years after Peter's death was always surrounded, by some of the younger generation. Her Yancey grandchildren often referred to visits with "Grandma Hinton." For them it was an all day trip with horse and carriage. Lurenna spent her last days with her sister Sarah Brock and is buried in the Brock graveyard,

John Hinton is referred to, only in his mother's will. There she lists her children: "George, Richard, Sarah, and Amanda, widow of Robert Yancey, also Mary Jane Armentrout and Ellen, wife of son John." It is recalled that a cousin, who could have been a daughter of John and Ellen, frequently visited her "Uncle George" Yancey, and "Cousin Nanny" Yancey Hulvey. Someone from her family would bring her to Hinton, west of Harrisonburg, and some of her cousins in the Valley would meet her there. She is remembered but not her name or where she lived.

Sallie Armentrout, daughter of Mary Jane and Frank, married Charles Sellers and lived near New Market, Virginia. Most of the others lived in the area of Lacey Springs, except Lewis who lived near Elkton.
